The company

Founded in 2005 in Dosrius (Barcelona)

The fast-fashion clothing business model causes a large stock of unsold clothing. The NEW clothes, in perfect condition, have to be disposed of, since storing it involves an additional storage cost for fashion companies.

Tekstila, was born with the aim of bringing the unsold stock of branded clothing to the international markets. The company buys seasonal items from the best fast-fashion clothing brands at very competitive prices, and then sells them wholesale to other companies in markets where these brands clothing has permissions.

The company contributes to giving a second life to all these excess stocks, and at the same time, it helps the brands reduce a large part of their storage costs while recovering liquidity from old collections.

Tekstila differentiates itself by betting on the circular economy, creating lasting relationships based on trust with its customers and suppliers, and providing traceability and transparency in all its operations for brand protection
